- The Department of Philosophy and Religion recommends that students study abroad during their junior year.
- Religion-related courses taken abroad will count toward the Religious Studies major requirement of nine credits to be taken outside the Department of Philosophy and Religion.
- To have courses approved, students must submit course descriptions and completed course equivalency forms to their Religious Studies advisor.
- If you are interested in studying abroad, please let your Religious Studies advisor know as soon as possible. He/she will work with you to locate the best program for your academic interests.

Please see the reverse for a selection of study-abroad options!
